THE UGLY TRUTH: About your Job – Career – Future

THE UGLY TRUTH: About your Job – Career – Future by Oscar Bruce

If you work for yourself: the odds you will still be in business in the year 2005 are only 1 in 5. In today's workplace swirling with change, one million people will start a new business this year. The UGLY truth is, 800,000 will be "out of business" in the year 2005.

If you work for someone else: It is likely you won't be with them in five years. Even major corporations lack staying power in today's international economy. The average job cycle is down to 3 to 5 years but in recent months has been cut much shorter. Even our years of experience become obsolete over-night. In fact most will change careers (not jobs) five to seven times over the next 40 years.

Security is no longer in the job: the company, the industry or any other outside force. Our intrinsic worth is measured by what we can contribute to any organization today and tomorrow.

What can I do, you ask: to provide security no matter where I go or what I aspire. The only transferable skill that can be applied to any opportunity is your ability to (1) Make your point. (2) Sell your ideas. (3) Express yourself persuasively and convincingly. These skills never become obsolete.

Research studies prove: that a strong command of the English Language is directly linked to your career advancement, to the money you make, and to your social success. The Johnson

O'Connor Research Foundation studies human aptitudes and their link to success. They report – "An extensive range of verbal skills accompanies outstanding success more than any other single characteristic." – In hard times the same studies show that those laid off first tend to be low communications skills people.

Michael Leaven said: In his book, Guerrilla P.R., "ability to use language persuasively, is arguably the most important attribute. Verbal communications is the #1 key to personal and business success."

FUTURIST, Rolf Jensen: director of the Copenhagen Institute for Future Studies. "We are in the twilight of a society based on personal communication skills." Society will place new value on the language of persuasion. Specialists in the art of inspiring human emotions will be in demand. Companies will recruit people based on how they express their ideas.

Advanced Conversation Skills Coach: Oscar Bruce in his book WINNING WORDS WINNING WAYS asserts that "With a strong command of language you will go farther and get ahead faster."

Give Yourself The Edge:

At a time when people are being laid off at an expected rate, give yourself the edge when it comes to keeping your current job or being first to get a new job.

You Need More than Skills & Experience to Get a Job These Days... by David Green

A lot of people believe that an employer's decision on hiring a candidate depends on just skills and experience. Well they couldn't be farther from the truth because that is false.

THE UGLY TRUTH: About your Job – Career – Future

Here is the truth...

Skills and experience within your profession aren't what gets candidates the job. The truth is that there are too many candidates with the proper skills and experience to get the job, and ONLY one usually gets the job.

Companies are looking for more than skills and experience these days. So it's extremely important that you all your individual characteristics mirror your passion.

So what are the other factors that are usually invisible to candidates?

Self-Awareness - who are you and where are you going? What are your plans for the present and the future? How do you know what you want? How do you know that you're right for this job? Employers want to make sure that you're not lost.

Learning Skills - Are you willing to learn? Are you current on trends and technology? Are you a person who loves to "grow" within their profession? You want to show an employer that you're a candidate that learns in order to progress your career.

Adaptability – With everything changing so rapidly today, it's possible that tomorrow your skills may no longer be relevant. Are you a person who adapts well to change?

Character – Do you show passion in your industry, because when you do, it projects through your résumé, cover letter, and especially during the interview. An employer wants a dependable trustworthy employee. The more you project your positive character, the better!

You can have a huge advantage over your competition by going one step. Create a career portfolio and within it make sure that you showcase all the categories above in the proper manner. I guarantee that this will give you a major edge over your competition.

So you see that it's not all about skills and experience. It's really important that you consider the factors above, because them alone can get you the job
