The Best Sites In Alaska

By Terence Vader

One of the most beautiful places on earth is the state of Alaska. Although cold, the sites are simply stunning. Whether sightseeing through natural parks, looking for bear, camping, taking a tour, or just dining out, you will fall in love with the land and the people. If you have been thinking about a vacation and are not sure where to go, we recommend you consider a trip to the most stunning place - Alaska. To help you plan your trip, we have provided some suggestions on what you might do and see.

Alaska Native Heritage Center - Anchorage

To help you learn about the various cultures of Alaska and the native people, this center teaches about customs, practices, and arts. This experience includes walking through native homes, watching ancient practices and performances, and being able to gain a better understanding about the importance of hunting and fishing in this vast land.

Iditarod Headquarters - Wasilla

If you have never taken the opportunity to watch the Iditarod on television, you are missing an amazing adventure. At the Iditarod headquarters, you can learn about this massive dog sled race. Then on the first Saturday each March, the ceremonial start of the race occurs in Anchorage with the actual race starting in Wasilla the following day. Exciting and fun, this is truly an incredible experience.

Alaska Seal Life Center - Seward

>From monetary settlements coming out of the Exxon Valdez oil spill, this center was created to help teach people about marine biology, seal life, and animal rehabilitation. This area of Alaska is mesmerizing, rich with an abundance of sea mammals, fish, and birds. Perfect for families, the Alaska Seal Life Center offers hands-on exhibits while teaching about this state's ecosystem. Known as one of the most intriguing places to visit, we highly recommend it.

Denali National Park

The Best Sites In Alaska

Denali, which translates to "The Great One", is the native name for the highest peak in all of North America - Mount McKinley. This mountain range offers a number of peaks where all types of wildlife live to include bear, wolves, Dall sheep, wolves, and moose. If you enjoy the great outdoors, you can take a tour of the area or enjoy a day of hiking. Spread out over some six million acres, you will immediately fall in love with the natural beauty.

Glacier Bay - South East Alaska

At Glacier Bay, you will discover 13 tidewater glaciers. Although they are all spectacular, the three largest and most impressive include Margerie, Muir, and Johns Hopkins. Glaciers are located in the south half of the state, with many of those being accessible by foot or vehicle. For those harder to reach, you can enjoy magnificent views from airplane or boat. To see the largest concentration of calving glaciers in the state, you want to spend time at Prince William Sound.

Bear Watching

One of the favorite things to do in Alaska is to look for bear. With grizzly, brown, and polar bears, the very sight of these incredible creatures is breathtaking. Of course, safety rules are important to follow but the best places to visit include the Anan Wildlife Observatory where black bear feed in the salmon stream and Pack Creek where brown bear live on the island. Additionally, Katmai National Park is an excellent adventure where from July to September, you can enjoy brown bear feeding off salmon runs and Kodiak Island, the famous place where the largest bear in the world is seen, the Kodiak brown bear.

What To Expect The Alaska Cruise To Be Like

By Sarah K. Jenkins

You are considering an Alaskan cruise. Won't it be too cold to enjoy? What in the world will you do all of that time on the ship? And, is there really anything great to see besides snow? The fact is that a cruise through Alaska has a lot to offer even to those that are used to spending their vacations in the hot summer sun. Alaska is a wonderful wilderness, even said to be the last frontier within the United States. Therefore, it is a priced location for travel and for that reason, you should take that trip.

First off, the cruise lines travel to Alaska during the late spring to summer months. During this time, temperatures can range from the mid 50's through 75 or more. Although you are surrounded by the water and the slow moving glacier, there is more to Alaska than just snow. For example, take into consideration the mountain ranges, consider a bit of dog sledding, go fishing for King Salmon, see whales in their natural habitat, watch for bears, and even enjoy a completely different and unique American culture that is Alaska.

Finally, when it comes to your cruise ship, there is much to see there as well. Many of the cruise lines offer cruises that offer a wide range of entertainment. You may be able to get into shows, participate in some on board casinos and even enjoy some relaxing time basking in the sun. There are many more things to take advantage of as well.

When you come to Alaska, you can count on a number of things. You will be dazzled by the natural beauty of the land. You will be amazed by the wilderness that you can get so close to. And, you will have the time of your life with the people that you love as well.
