

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

The Consumer Push and Drive for the Camera Phone

By Colin P

One of the most innovative and widely sought after pieces of technology to reach the market in recent years has been the camera phone. In point of fact, the demand for a camera phone on the part of the typical consumer around the world is so intense that there oftentimes are situations when there is a backlog on orders for one camera phone model or another.

Naturally, when the camera phone first hit the market not that long ago, it was a pricy item. But, as with so many technological advances, in short time the basic camera phone became affordable for most people. Indeed, as more and more people sought to trade in an older cellular or mobile phone, it was the camera phone that they sought as a replacement.

Of course, in addition to the basic camera phone becoming more affordable and more widely used, there were many new developments in the world of the camera phone. In little time, there were so many variations on the theme of the basic camera phone, that in many ways it is more than safe to say that when it comes to the camera phone, there truly is a camera phone to fit the needs and desires of any consumer the world over.

If you are interested in owning a camera phone, you should spend some time determining how you will use your camera phone. For example, if you largely will use your phone to take pictures of family and friends and the like, you really will not need that complicated of a camera phone. On the other hand, in this day and age, many people are using their camera phone products for professional or work related purposes. As such, these people tend to desire a more sophisticated version of the camera phone.

Once you identify the primary use that your camera phone will be put to now and into the future, you can then be able to single out some different camera phone models that will best fit your needs and desires. By making a preliminary list of what exact camera phone models will suit your needs, you can then begin efficiently shopping around for the specific camera phone that will most appropriately fulfill your objectives in owning and using such a product.

In the 21st century, you have the ability to shop for a camera phone both in the brick and mortar world and on the Internet and World Wide Web. By making certain that you do shop around both in the real world and in cyberspace, you will have the best chance of finding the most ideal camera phone and a price that best fits within your budget. And, by shopping around online, you will be able to save time in your search for a camera phone.

In the end, by taking the time to find the perfect camera phone for your needs, you will end up with a camera phone that will be well used and well liked by you today and on into the future.

More information on

Camera Phones

How to take Great Photos of Your Pet

By Kelly Paal

We all love our animals. They do such funny, adorable, and cute things. But somehow when that camera comes out they run and hide or they just seem to always be pointed away from the camera when you push the button. Well here are some tips to help you have a better chance at getting great photos of your pet.

1. Don't wake your pet out of deep sleep and attempt to coerce him into performing for the camera. It won't happen. Try to take photos of your pet during their routine playtime.
2. If there is enough daylight to take photos then turn the flash off. My cat has learned to close his eyes just before the flash goes off. He learned that little trick quick too! Many times a camera flash is just too bright for them, that's why they point away from you when they know that you're taking photos.
3. Don't try to get them looking into the camera. If there is someone around who can play with your pet just get a shot of them playing with someone else. You can have the photo with the person and the pet or get close to crop the person out of the shot.
4. If your pet always runs away from you every time you pull the camera out try leaving the camera sit out where it can be seen. Take photos of other things in the home and try turning the flash off.
5. Be prepared to grab your camera and take photos when your pet is ready, read "doing something cute." I've been able to get some of the best photos of my cat when he's just doing something on his own.

Remember don't put pressure on your animal to perform for the camera. Think more on the lines of catch them in their natural habitat. Our pets want to make us happy and you can easily confuse them by pressuring them to look good for the camera. Also be prepared to take a whole lot of bad photos for that one really good one.

Copyright 2004 Kelly Paal

Kelly Paal is a Freelance Nature and Landscape Photographer, exhibiting nationally and internationally. Recently she started her own business Kelly Paal Photography (

The Consumer Push and Drive for the Camera Phone

www.kellypaalphotography.com

). She has an educational background in photography, business, and commercial art. She enjoys applying graphic design and photography principles to her web design.

How to take Great Photos of Your Pet

Cellular Phone Buyers Information

How To Choose a Great Camera Phone

Camera Phone VS Digital Camera

Cellular Phone Features

See-Thru Guide for Cameras

Web Audio Plus Software

Rolodex Pro Contact Manager Software

File Resource Meter Software

How to Buy a Car Without Getting Ripped Off!

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!