The Psychology of Color and Internet Marketing by Pam Renovato

As Internet marketers it is imperative that we constantly look for ways to make a good impression on our viewers. Your business depends on it. We only have a short amount of time, before a decision on whether or not we are professionals will be made. We must make good use of this time.

The first instant we have at presenting ourselves to viewers is our web page. Which brings us to the importance of good design and proper color choices. First impressions are very important. We must make the best of them because we are only allowed one.

Remember this is your store front, and you must treat it respectfully. While content, customer service, a niche in your market, and a high subscriber list, are crucial to your life on the internet. Good web page design and proper color choices, are crucial as well. It is a good part of the reason why viewers bother to look over your content at all. Regardless of how incredible your content may be, you need to welcome them and make them feel at home, while they are there. Or they will leave.

Did know you can control the mood of your visitors by using certain color choices? This is a simple concept that is very often ignored. Why?

Human emotions are very often triggered by color. You need to know which colors trigger which emotions.

Color can make the difference between buying and selling. If used correctly. You need to choose the right color combinations for your site and product.

Everything we, buy, eat, wear, and all of the things that take up space where we live, work or play, all have colors. These colors provide a psychological and emotional response in everyone. These responses reflects who we are and the things that we think and feel.

Color is the first thing we notice and the last thing we forget. If used properly it can be a powerful tool. It is the doorway to our deepest thoughts and feelings, and desires. This is an issue worth discussing.

Which colors should you use?

Well, it is always best to keep your main content on a white background. This is easier on the eyes and will provide a sense of professionalism. The color white triggers emotions such as: purity, peace, and perfection.

While white is an important color, you will probably want to compliment your site with other colors as well. After all, there is creativity in each and every one of us. There is huge color spectrum for us to choose from. Which colors are best!

Here are a few ideas to help you.

Red colors can stimulate warmth, hunger, and excitement. Cooler colors such as green and blues, enhance calm and content feelings. Dark colors make objects seem heavier, while light colors make them seem lighter.

Yellow may reflect a lack of worry, while black a troubled state. Of course not all colors mean the same things to all people. Yellow may sometimes mean cheap, Green may mean money or greed, black may mean elegance or death.

Color has become a science and it is a much needed weapon as part of your marketing arsenal. You will need to take great thought in choosing color as it will identify you, because once a color is "owned" it is associated with you and your company. I am sure you have noticed this with examples such as Coca Cola red, Tide orange, and John Deere Green. It is just as important to your identity as your logo. If a shape provides a symbol, be aware that color does the same.

Think carefully when choosing colors! Applying a certain color to your product is just plain logic.

For example: In stores colors identify, flavors, brands, and products: Green in a cleaner says pine— in a mouthwash says mint, blue very often means strong mint— icy cool. Clear means additive free. Red found in strawberries, cherries, and apples is very appealing. You would never choose gray for laundry detergent because you don't want gray clothes, you want brightly colored clothes. Blue, very unappetizing on a dinner plate, is much more successful as a dinner plate.

Because it strongly affects mood. Grays and browns seem somber and often depressing. But they can take on a more cheerful attitude with compliments of red. No matter how you use them they suggest weight, or something heavy. This would provide your visitors with a feeling of stability and strength. Emotions like this will help your visitors to associate your site with solidity and confidence. Other colors such as burgundy, oyster, beige, blues will also provide a feeling of solidity.

The list goes on and on.

Don't overlook the issue of color with your business. Believe me it matters!

You see once we lived in a black and white world. TV was black, printed publications were predominantly black. All of that changed in the 60's and has created a chain reaction that holds true today. Color is the most important attention getter. As humans we bring our own tastes to the world. How do we choose which color to be identified with? What is the right color? Sometimes there is no right answer you just have to take your best shot. But the number one choice of Corporate America is still blue.

Gemstones And Color Psychology

By Kadence Buchanan

Favorite colors can tell a lot about ones personality. Color psychology is the study of colors and the effects it has on us. It is believed that owning a gemstone that matches your emotions brings good luck. This article will guide you in choosing the right gemstone that matches your emotions.

Blue reflects spirituality. Like the seas or oceans that are calm are blue, people with blue as their favorite color tend to have calm personalities. Calmness inspires thought and thus blue color also reflects thought and creativity in a person who likes this color. Some of the gemstones that are blue are Sapphire, Zircon, Aquamarine and Topaz.

Red is the brightest color to the eyes. According to color psychology, looking at red color makes us physically active and gives us energy. Because of the color's clarity to the eyes, it is associated with honesty. And because of the effect of the color on the body it reflects courageous and strong nature of the person who likes the color. There are many gemstones that are red; some of the prominent ones include Ruby, Spinel and Garnet.

Green symbolizes peace. People who love green are usually peace loving and civilized people. The best gemstones for a person who has green as a favorite color are Emerald and Jade.

Purple is the color of sophistication. It shows deep thought and wisdom. People who have purple color as favorites keep a lot of secrets. They are sophisticated, sensitive, artistic, visionary and observant and have good self-esteem. Violet and lilac are shades of purple and show the almost same character traits. One more things about people who fancy purple is that they adapt well to circumstances and other people. Gemstones for purple color lovers are Garnet, Tanzanite and Amethyst.

Some of us do not have any one particular favorite. Therefore color psychology to the level used in this article is not always accurate. However the subject itself is much broader and more detailed, and using the correct methods accuracy can be achieved with every individual no matter how peculiar his choice of colors may be. However, these general rules used in this article are good guidelines for buying a gemstone that will satisfy you, and if you are someone who believes in superstition, hopefully even bring you luck.
