This System Works Even Better When You Apply It To Real Websites

By JIM GREEN

I posted an article recently on how a spoof website I set up temporarily grabbed 3217 email addresses in a matter of weeks.

I was testing out a new system that claims it can seduce the spiders to visit any website, and in the process of my experiment, the following also happened.

1. The site had an Alexa ranking of 198.
2. It had captured the No.1 Spot for the core keyword phrase on Google, Yahoo!, MSN, AOL, Lycos and Ask Jeeves.
3. My hosting service traffic stats reported 18,945 visitors.

So far so good on a spoof but was it a fluke?

There was only one way to find out and that was to assess the effectiveness of the technique in a real measurable marketing scenario.

Enthused by the results of the spoof I then applied the system to two of my real websites and you can check out for yourself what happened this time

o Go to www.bt.yahoo.com

and enter 'how to products' in the search box and you should find that

<http://howtoproducts-xl.com> ranks at No.1 out of 1,850,000,000 competitive pages (yes, one billion, 850 million) as it does as I write this on October 20th 2005.

o Go to www.google.com

and enter 'writing for profit' in the search box and you should find that

<http://www.writing-for-profit.com> ranks at No.1 out of 44,900,000 competitive pages - as it did on October 20th 2005.

There was no fluke this time...

Both of the websites I tested out are well established and have always enjoyed high rankings in the major search engines but to achieve No.1 on Yahoo! out of 1 billion, 850 million pages is off-the-wall positioning.

I've decided now on the basis of this quantifiable evidence of its efficiency to inject the system into all 21 of my websites - and I'll let you know how I go...

DisabilitySecrets.com aims to distribute crucial information on the important processes in getting your claim for disability and ssi benefits. We all know how hard it is to apply for disability and ssi benefits since Social Security has an unclear and not understandable procedures. This is the reason why DisabilitySecrets.com has joined the rapid explosion of websites due to the fast-rising Internet technology.

When we look for similar sites and enter the keyword "social security disability" using different search engines, millions of numerous pages pop out. However, they are only related to the topic in some way but not wholly. Usually, the first twenty websites that will come out in that search will fall into categories namely: government websites, companies selling books, law firms soliciting for services, and websites whose focus is a specific impairment such as diabetes or congestive heart failure.

These generated sites will typically offer substantial information about social security disability or ssi benefits. Practically, none will explain in detail how the disability process actually works, particularly from the vantage point of someone who has processed cases. And, being more informed about the mechanics of the claim evaluation process can help you in making decisions for yourselves and can even take steps to be ready for a lengthy and tedious process. Therefore, there is really a need for websites that will serve this purpose - one of which is DisabilitySecrets.com.

However, with DisabilitySecrets.com, the information in this website can definitely help you understand how to apply for benefits with the Social Security Administration (SSA), how the system works, what SSA doesn't tell you about the application and appeal process, what you can do on your own to help your case, and what you should never do that might potentially harm your case. These are the things that you must get from SSA but almost never will and DisabilitySecrets.com is delivering them for you.

According to statistics, 70% of all disability benefit claims are denied at application. This only means that you have to learn everything about the benefit approval system to better your chances of winning the claim, with or without the help of an attorney or non-attorney representative.

See it, guys, that's how important DisabilitySecrets.com is for those people who deserve to receive their claims for disability and ssi benefits. And, this site aims to help you in looking for competent and experienced disability examiners who will assist you in the entire process.
