Tips On Purchasing Baby Formula

By John H. Rogers

It provides your newborn with the nourishment that he/she needs and help them to develop proper habits that may very well dictate their future health. Baby formula is your baby's first taste of milk and it's important to make that first experience a good one. When selecting baby formula, you will want to make sure that it is healthy and made by a well known manufacturer. A company that has been in business for years would be a more reputable source of baby formula than one that isn't as widely known.

When purchasing baby formula, take special care to inspect the outside packaging. It is important that it not be cracked, broken or leaking in any way. It is also important that, if the baby formula features a removable lid, that the seal not be broken or give the appearance of having been tampered with. If any of these signs are present, you should not only avoid purchasing the food, but you should also alert the manager so that he/she can remove the product from the shelf.

Another important tip to purchasing baby formula is to check the expiration date on every package prior to purchasing or feeding your baby. Before checking out in the grocery store, make sure the expiration date has not passed. If you tend to stock up on baby formula, always make sure to recheck the expiration date again prior to allowing your child to eat the food. Sometimes, weeks and months can go by quickly and this is why it is so important to make sure that your baby formula is still fresh.

For various reasons, baby formula is often recalled by the manufacturer. It is best to keep updated on these recalls by staying tuned to the local news, reading the newspaper and even checking the manufacturer's website regularly for any pertinent recall information. If a recall should be issued for your baby formula, simply return it to the store without allowing your child to consume any of the product.

Because baby formula is so important to your child's development, make sure that you select that which is healthy and for your little one. Feeding instructions vary depending on the child's age, so you may refer to the packaging guidelines for further preparation instructions and how to save the remaining product for later use. This information will vary depending on the manufacturer, so always refer to the label for further details.

Exciting Baby Offers

By Rachel Lynn

Finding out that a new baby is coming is an exciting event for almost everyone. Everyone—family, friends, acquaintances—are rushing around in anticipation trying to get all the details about the newest addition. Not only are the families excited, but many businesses are caught up in the new baby as well. With free baby offers, these businesses want to share in a successful new baby.

Enfamil Family Beginnings gives several benefits for expectant or new mothers. Even you do not plan to use formula for your baby, you can still join and gain those benefits. You may later find that you need to supplement with formula or switch to formula from breastfeeding as circumstances change over time. Either way, you will be happy that you signed up for Enfamil's programs.

The Enfamil Family Beginnings program will give you much needed information about properly feeding a baby. The information includes tips that cover birth to toddler needs. Included in the offer is a large diaper bag with a smaller diaper bag, both sturdy enough to handle the beating that most diaper bags receive over time and use.

You will also receive several handy shipments of formula for free. If you decide to supplement breastfeeding or if you are bottle feeding, this is a wonderful benefit. Even if you do not decide to use the formula, you could donate it to needy families that have a hard time buying formula.

American Baby Magazine offers a free subscription. With the first year free, the magazine is full of helpful parenting tips and information about everything you could need to bring up baby. We found some great baby information at
