There are a number of reasons for choosing natural pet foods, treats and supplies. First, use of natural products is consistent with a holistic view. A holistic approach considers all factors regarding your pet's health, not just individual symptoms. The top 10 benefits of choosing natural and holistic pet care are listed below.

- 1) Better nutrition– a natural diet reduces contact with unnecessary chemicals and preservatives while increasing the intake of quality nutrients and vitamins.
- 2) Less probability of developing disease– Quality natural foods can reduce the onset of a variety of health problems, including allergies, digestive disorders and more.
- 3) Treats source of disease not just symptoms– Holistic care also looks at an animal's surroundings for ways to improve health. Lowering potential causes of stress, such as loneliness or territorial conflicts, can be helpful in improving overall health. Sufficient exercise and grooming are also elements of good holistic care.
- 4) Longer lifespan– natural pet care will help pets live a long life and give you many years of faithful companionship.
- 5) Enhanced quality of life– there's no use on living longer if the quality of life is not good, holistic pet care, will provide a better quality of life for your pet.
- 6) Faster healing– Holistic treatment of existing conditions by use of natural products will promote faster healing as natural ingredients are generally absorbed better by your pet and thus speeds the healing process.
- 7) Human safety– another reason for using natural pet products is the reduction in human exposure to toxins. Most pets are in frequent contact with people, especially children. Contact with a pet can mean risk of exposure to whatever is on your pet, whereas natural treatments avoid these risks.

8) Protects the environment— also, natural products breakdown and are absorbed into the environment better than chemical agents and, consequently, are more earth friendly.

9) Saves time— you won't be wasting your time dragging your pets to the vet's office to treat different illnesses as the holistic approach targets the individual as a whole entity, treating existing conditions from their source, not just their symptoms, and preventing new ones from developing.

10) Saves money— you won't be wasting your money on cheaper products that ultimately can be a contributor to declining health in your pets and thereby creating more vet visit and bills.

Dog, Cat, And Other Pet Natural Remedies

By Joe Rote

Since ancient times, hundreds of thousands of known herbs and other natural remedies have been used to treat human illness, and unwanted conditions. Like people, today's pets are affected by the health hazards of pollution, poor nutrition, and stress, and are becoming more and more vulnerable to chronic disease and bad health.

Animals in the wild have always been known to instinctively find and consume many of the healing herbs that may help them overcome illness, and aid in building healthy bodies.

Now more than ever people are starting to realize the value of using natural vitamins, minerals, herbals, and other natural products to prevent or treat dog, cat and other pet diseases such as:

Pet —Aggression, Stress, Anxiety Pet —Diabetes Pet —Digestive Problems Pet —Kennel Cough Pet
—Parasites Pet —Urinary Infection, (UTI)

You can also choose from a variety of natural remedies for non – disease conditions, such as: Pet
—Teething Pet —Poor skin and coat conditions Pet —Cleanse-Disinfect Wounds Pet —Teething Pets
Pet —Weight Management etc. Just to name a few.

Many veterinarians are also beginning to recognize the holistic methods of keeping our pets healthy, as well as using them for enhancement and maintenance.

Your pet can be helped by a good diet, with the latest findings leaning towards the development of pet foods with less carbohydrates and more protein. Add the proper supplements and/or herbal formulas as needed, and you will have a healthy, happy, attractive pet.
