Trolls and Norfins

Trolls and Norfins by Gayle Olson

These lucky little dolls with the funny little faces and wild hair were born many years ago in a town in northern Jutland, Denmark. In 1951, Thomas Dam began carving little wooden trolls, while his wife and daughter began making stuffed toy trolls. In 1959 the Dam family began a factory, making little vinyl trolls.

Each model was designed and made in wax which was covered with copper to create the mold for the little creatures. Thomas Dam continued to design and create until his death in 1989. Today production continues by his son Nils and daughter Lajla who makes the molds for the new designs.

Once upon a time...

The story of the trolls began many, many years ago. A kind troll named Uras lived on a small forested island called Gjøl in the Lim Fjord in Denmark. He lived in a cave with his very large family. As the family grew bigger, the cave grew smaller. Uras decided he would need to build a new and bigger cave. To make the work easier, Uras cast an old ancient spell to make the trolls bigger and stronger.

Trolls do not do very well when they try to cast spells, when Uras attempted his the trolls grew smaller and smaller. Every time Uras tried to cast the spell the trolls would grow even more smaller! The troll children grew so small that they were able to run away and hide from the bigger Uras. The hurried away out of the cave and ran away!

That is why today these lucky little trolls can be found all over the world.

Quick Blizzard Strategy

Trolls and Norfins

By Jim Thio

In map legend there are eight groups of trolls. You can kill them with 3 successive blizzards.

It's very difficult to pull this out at day.

I usually wait 'till night.

You make an archmage. Then get close to them. Then click "shift b" and then aim the blizzard. When you're aiming, click the left mouse button 3 times.

Here is a catch; you must perform the triple click before you engage your enemy. Otherwise your mage will wait till he finish of the trolls before casting the blizzard.

Also, you need to be in range of the trolls shot. Otherwise, the trolls will move and the blizzard may miss the trolls. When you're done, you should have like 30 hit points left.

Do this right, and you can quickly kill the trolls and then gain health in the fountain.

Oh ya, quickly expand after you finish off the trolls. Also, quickly buy the goblin shredder. You'll run out of wood soon. Shredders are the most cost effective wood gathering strategy. One is enough.

Then build dwarfs, sorcerers, and priests. Those two are awesome. Some people would suggest using the paladin. However, the mountain king has much more fire power.

Also the priests are good at healing anyway.

So a paladin is more like an over kill in healing department.

The mountain king can do storm bolt and thunder clap. Bash is also a good skill. I often found my mountain king run out of mana with combination of storm bolt and thunder clap.

However, I like the combination of the 2. You see, with brilliance aura in full, people's mana will improve greatly. That way, there is enough for the mountain king to drain his mana quickly.

Check your enemy if they build flying units. Don't forget the airplane to counter it. I reserve 1 or 2 just in case. I don't even build the flying machines' ground attack.

That's because my flying machines are often destroyed by my own blizzard if it can shoot ground.

Of course, with 2 bases, and a shredder, you'll have virtually infinite gold and lumber. Build tanks.
