Virginia Tech Hokies Cruise Over Huskies

By Sebastien Veilleux

The Hokies of Virginia Tech had a soft game on Saturday when they hosted unranked the Northeastern Huskies. In the preseason polls, Virginia Tech was ranked #17. They wasted no time dispatching the Huskies in this game. Just six minutes into the game the Hokies scored their first TD. It was a six yard run by Branden Ore. Two minutes later Sean Glennon threw a 54 yard pass to Josh Morgan for the second strike. It was now 14-0 and the Hokies were on their way to going 1-0 to start the season.

Four minutes later the Hokies George Bell ran into the end zone from a yard out to give them a commanding 21-0 lead. The game was basically over at this point. Still, the Hokies added two more touchdowns and a field goal for insurance. The Northeastern Huskies did absolutely nothing on offense. They put up a big fat bagel. The Virginia Tech Hokies won 38-0.

Hokies QB Sean Glennon was 15 of 18 for 222 yards, three touchdowns and one interception. Aside from the one interception, he looked crisp. His Huskies counterpart, Anthony Orio, didn't look as good. He was 13 of 24 for just 103 yards. He also threw two interceptions.

Both teams put up about 100 yards rushing. There were little nibbles here and there. For the Hokies, Branden Ore had 54 yards over 11 carries, but 14 yards came on one play. George Bell had 30 yards on 8 carries. 13 of those 30 yards came via a single run. On the Huskies side, Maurice Murray had 69 yards, which was the bulk of the rushing game. His longest run was 11 yards.

Next up for Virginia Tech is North Carolina. They are traveling for that game. Last season the Hokies hosted this matchup and they destroyed North Carolina 30-3. There's a good chance that this year's contest will be more of the same. Hopefully North Carolina will be able to perform a little better than the Northeastern Huskies did this week.

Virginia Tech doesn't have a hard schedule this season. Perhaps their toughest challenge will come on November 4 when they travel to the unfriendly confines of the Orange Bowl in Miami to challenge the Hurricanes. Last season these two met in Virginia. The Miami Hurricanes defeated the Hokies 27-7. It was one of the two only losses the Hokies had. The other was to Florida State—they are not on the Hokies schedule this season.

Michael Vick

By Bob Johnson

An elementary student who first showed an interest in baseball and basketball, Michael Vick later developed his love of football. Born in June 1980, this Newport News, Virginia native is now the quarterback for the NFL's Atlanta Falcons.

In his early teens, Vick became involved in football as his choice after-school activity. At that time, he seemingly gave up all other sports in order to concentrate on football. Through high school, his love of football flourished and carried over into his college years. Attending Virginia Tech, Michael Vick gained instant stardom as a collegiate player with 3 rushing touchdowns during his first game. With the help of Vick, the Virginia Tech Hokies enjoyed a phenomenal 11–0 season and secured a seat at the 2000 Bowl Championship Series. Even though they were defeated by Florida, Michael Vick led the team to an impressive comeback after being 21 points down at one point.

During Michael Vick's inaugural collegiate season, he led the NCAA in passing efficiency, which earned him a record setting year for a freshman. Additionally, he was awarded the ESPY award as the nation's top college player, the inaugural Archie Griffin Award and was voted third in the 1999 Heisman Trophy candidates. With all of the awards and recognition, all eyes quickly became fixed on Michael Vick's participation with the Virginia Tech Hokies. In 2001, however, he decided to pursue his dream of professional football and set his sites on the NFL as Virginia Tech retired his jersey.

In a strange twist of fate, Michael Vick found himself as part of the 2000 Major League Baseball draft when the Colorado Rockies selected him for their team. A game that he had once given up during his teen years now seemed like a probable route for the college athlete. However, Vick had other plans in mind. In 2001, the Atlanta Falcons selected the youngster for their number one NFL draft pick. Despite several injuries, Michael Vick led the Falcons to a record 11–5 season in 2004 and has led the NFL franchise to be one of most competitive teams in the league.

As quarterback, Michael Vick's memorabilia and his replica jerseys have become one of the bestsellers for the NFL. The apparel and collectibles industry remains one of the largest revenue producing sectors of any sport, including the NFL. As fans flock to find their favorite gear, many seem to be lining up for anything pertaining to Michael Vick and his tremendous contribution to the Atlanta Falcons and the National Football League.
