What Will You Tell Your Grandchildren about the "Good Old Days?"

What Will You Tell Your Grandchildren about the "Good Old Days?" by Noel Peebles

When your children or grandchildren ask about "The Good Old Days" and what you were doing in the first decade of the new century... those times of great prosperity... that "Golden Age Of Opportunity"... "The Greatest Entrepreneurial Boom In History"... what will you tell them? What were you doing?

Did you capitalize on the wealth that was being created all around you? Will you tell them how you positioned yourself to take advantage of the opportunities that abounded? Or will you explain that you decided not to take part, or how you just missed out?

We've all looked upon the past as being "the good old days"...those times when life seemed so much easier, less complex... when life was slower, safer... and less competitive than what we are faced with today.

Those were the times when the best opportunities existed... all the best opportunities were snapped up years ago... weren't they? And what about the little guy in business, the small entrepreneur... he doesn't have a chance anymore against the powerful resources and might of those giant international corporate firms... does he (or she)?

Don't believe it!

Almost every week without fail someone says to me something like "you were lucky you started in the direct marketing business when you did... there were lots of opportunities then...it's too late now, by the time I get started the market will be flooded."

It always makes me smile, because when I first started in that business, the same thoughts had gone through my mind. The fact is...

We are surrounded by opportunities, but most people don't recognize them. For example, there are far more opportunities in direct marketing (and internet marketing) today, especially for the small guy, than I have ever known there to be in the past.

In 20 years from now people will look back and wish that they could have started a business, invested money, bought shares or property during the early years of the new century, when there were so many new opportunities.

Those really were "The Good Old Days", and the exciting reality is... we are living in them. HERE! NOW! You'll be able to tell your grandchildren all about them!

As author Maxwell Maltz once said – "What is opportunity, and when does it knock? It never knocks. You can wait a whole lifetime, listening, hoping, and you will hear no knocking. None at all. You are opportunity, and you must knock on the door leading to your destiny. You prepare yourself to recognize opportunity, to pursue and seize opportunity as you develop the strength of your personality, and build a self-image with which you are able to live... with your self-respect alive and growing."

Grandparents --- Homeschool Your Grandchildren And Feel Younger

By Joel Turtel

Grandparents, what better way to stay close to your grown children than to advise them about important issues like the dangers of public schools for your grandchildren? What better way to feel younger if you offer to help homeschool your grandchildren?

When your children grow up and get careers of their own, that doesn't mean you have to be lonely in a big, empty house and lose contact with your kids. Helping to homeschool your grandchildren can be a wonderful way for you to stay in close and loving contact with your grown children and grandchildren. You can be a loving part of the family again.

If you read "Public Schools, Public Menace," tell your grown children about how your grandkids are in real danger by going to public schools. Don't let your grandchildren's mind's, self–confidence, and love of learning go to waste in public schools. Give your grown children the book to read.

Even better, then offer to help watch the grandkids and homeschool them if your grown children and their spouses work. Who better to help your children and adorable grandchildren than you? Doing so could make your retirement years the happiest years of your life.

You have so much wisdom and knowledge that you have accumulated over the years. You have so much love you still have to give. How your children would appreciate your love and help with your grandchildren! If you helped homeschool your grandchildren, what a wonderful gift that would be for your children, your grandkids, and most of all, yourself. Think about it.
