What the Heck Does Vincent van Gogh
Have to do With Internet Marketing?

Everything and Nothing!

On my modest marketing web site I have a copy of a Vincent van Gogh portrait I created for a charity fund raiser some years back. It makes my main page load slow and more than a few people have suggested I should remove it – besides they say – van Gogh and Internet Marketing. What's the connection?

It all boils down to stubborn old learning habits that never die!

Let me explain – I am trained as an artist – one of the best ways to learn how to draw or paint is to copy the Masters. Spend a few hours copying a van Gogh, a Monet or a Durer and you will learn more in those few hours than months spent in the classroom pouring over color theories, composition charts, and paint mixtures.

Learn by seeing thru the eyes of the Masters!

They have been there, done that, and they have solved all the major problems for you. It works perfectly and artists have been learning this way for centuries.

When I started internet marketing I applied the same method. (Did I mention I was stubborn!) A few hours studying the Masters – their techniques, their marketing tools, their mind sets – saved me and they will save you from months (if not years) of trial and error.

Finding the Masters was the hardest part! With so many proclaimed and self-proclaimed 'gurus' on the web; finding the genuine article among all the 'bovine deposits' was extremely difficult.

However, it wasn't long before some names kept popping up, again and again.

Mark Joyner, Neil Shearing, Michael Glaspie, Phil Wiley...!

But where do you find these masters of internet marketing in order to study and dissect their marketing techniques – and yes 'copy' their 'Methods'. After all, a few hours studying their methods will save you from months of trial and error.

That's where an 18 year old kid named Joe Kumar enters the picture!

This brash young marketer had the nerve to pose a simple challenge to these master marketers:
"If you lost everything but your internet connection – how would you reach marketing success in just 30 days?"

The results to Joe's Challenge can only be classified as a Masterpiece.

A wealth of marketing techniques and methods you can 'study and copy'. Apply these techniques to your own efforts and watch your marketing soar!

Within minutes you can be reading how the Internet's best 'Master Marketers' answered Joe's question. The free sampling from this book alone is worth your time. Click the link to get it now:

And oh, yes – the van Gogh stays! To heck with load times; I'll put other fast loading anorexic pages elsewhere on my web site.

Van Gogh deserves center stage.

It's a matter of learning.

He's my constant reminder – if you want to succeed online – copy the Masters.

Change The Style Of Your Interior With A Minimum Of Costs

By Clark Vansteensel

The style of your interior depends for a great part on the decoration on the walls. Using the right picture on the right place can make your room look bigger. I experienced this for myself when I came in this business. I do sell reproduction paintings, you know.

Actually, I came in the reproduction painting business because I was amazed about what one painting can do to your living room. Let me explain. I had an old painting on my wall that looked very nice. But, there was something missing. I decided that I had to replace it. I always wanted a Van Gogh, but I knew I would never be able to buy one.

After a few months I discovered that there was a business that did just what I was looking for. I bought a reproduction painting from them, and this is the way my own business started. I was overwhelmed by the artistic talent of the reproductionist who captured the realistic impressionism of Van Gogh. So I decided to work together with these guys.

I figured out they use the same techniques the old masters used. With several painters who are specialized in one artist, and only reproduce work of that artist. There are specialists of Van Gogh, Monet, Renoir, Gauguin and a lot more impressionists.

Since I started this business I feel like helping other people realize their dream. They are affordable for everyone. You can already buy a "real" Van Gogh for as less as 120 USD. This is not too much for a beautiful lasting post-impressionistic piece of artwork. If you are searching for this kind of timeless house warming painting, go and check out my website at
