Who should win the Oscar?

Who should win the Oscar? by graham and julie

Who, do you think, should win the Oscar this year? Who has been the best male actor in film this year? Should it be Don Cheadle, in Hotel Rwanda, Johnny Depp in Finding Neverland, Leonardo DiCaprio in The Aviator, Clint Eastwood in Million Dollar Baby or Jamie Foxx in Ray.

What about Leading female Actress? Who gets your vote? Annette Bening in Being Julie, Catalina Sandino Moreno in Maria Full of Grace, Imelda Staunton in Vera Drake, Hilary Swank in Million Dollar Baby or Kate Winslet in Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind.

How about you? Have you given an outstanding performance during 2004? Did you created a breath-taking, unforgettable performance during the past year to get a nomination for the Life Performance Oscar?

When you accept that your role in your life is to give the best performance you can. To be you. To focus on your natural talents and your relationship with others will improve. Then others will nominate you for a Life Performance Oscar.

So how has 2004 been for you? Did you really touch your potential? Or did you accept second best? When faced with all the other actors on the world stage, did you fall into the trap of:

·trying to compete with them? Or did you stick with your unique part and deliver to the best of your ability?

·spending your time wondering what others thought about you? Or did you aim to reach your potential and allow others to re think their roles as a result of interacting with you.

When you accept your role as an actor on the world stage then you have no one to compete with but yourself. When you accept that you are an unique individual, with your own skills and abilities, there is no need to compete with anyone. You just need to evolve your uniqueness. You, after all, have something important and great to give the world so why try and be like someone else. Why try to mimic their role?

Who should win the Oscar?

In a film or a play each actor concentrates on delivering their role to be the best of their ability. Life is no different. To ensure you have a successful life all you need to do is concentrate on your role and deliver, to the best of your ability. To be a great person you just need to produce a great performance. You have the skills and knowledge all you need is the courage to deliver.

When you go for it, you will be successful and, who knows, maybe next year, you will be nominated for the Oscar in Life performance.

Good Luck.

GENNY GETS A LESSON IN POWER

By Oscar Bruce

GENNY GETS A LESSON IN POWER by Oscar Bruce

Genny Lloyd watched open-mouthed as Glenn Holloway came barreling through the room almost at a run, his face beet-red, his expensive jacket slung over his shoulder like an old sweatshirt, and clearly so furious he didn't even know the others were there. When he disappeared into his corner office with a thunderous slam of the door, Genny looked around and asked wonderingly, "What on earth was THAT all about?"

"That," said the man next to her, "was about the fact that Oscar has once again wiped the floor with him in a meeting. He can't stand it – he always acts like that afterward. You'll get used to it."

Genny was puzzled. "Hasn't Glenn been here longer than Oscar Bruce?" Sure, and that's why it makes Glenn so mad when Oscar pulls off one of these coups. Our fearless leader will spend weeks getting a presentation ready, making sure it's perfect. And then he has to sit there while Oscar just "wings it" effortlessly. Then when the time comes to vote, the votes go to Oscar. You can always tell when he's come out of one of those."

Who should win the Oscar?

Genny was baffled. She hadn't been here long, but she'd had time to learn that Glenn was a capable man who knows the business inside and out. How could Oscar Bruce give him so much trouble, she wondered?

LANGUAGE is your only source of real power. You have a language, of course. You may have more than one. It's almost a sure bet you have not been using that language with the kind of expert skill of which you are fully capable.

You've probably been let to believe that people who use language with great skill are either "born with a silver tongue in their mouths" or have acquired their skill over the course of many years of intensive training.
