Why I Love Miami Beach Florida

By Bill Johnson

Among the many attractive reasons for visiting Miami Beach, Florida, are, of course, the excuse now known as the must-attend Spring Break, or the roller-blading beach beauties, or the ideal weather conditions.

But more glamorous reasons, transcending the traveler's penchant for balmy bay winds and such, is in the reputation a place like Miami Beach, Florida has for featuring popular TV programs and series and hosting films which have a Miami Beach, Florida setting.

The first long-standing show of the past is of course the Don Johnson and Phillip Michael Thomas original "Miami Vice" version, which highlighted the Miami Beach, Florida scenes, ocean- and landscapes, and even southern fashions of the seventies and eighties--the open necked t-shirt and sports coat and shoes without socks look that spread through the land as fast as Disco gold chains and polyester did.

But in the same genre, thirty years later, the even more influential Miami Beach, Florida show is CSI: MIAMI. The hang-dog heroic, the neo-Clint Eastwood with an intellect of David Caruso's character leads the team into the Miami Beach, Florida luxury homes, onto the speedboats and yachts, and through the hippest of clubs of the famous party town. The details are fascinating; the scenes are riveting.

So maybe the crime statistics--implied--are too off-putting for one to think of actually taking vacation at Miami Beach, Florida....

Then the cinematic way to go is by old films and newer non-detective/mystery/crime story themes. That is, maybe one can understand the local offerings, the schools, the libraries, the networking possibilities, the real estate, by watching "Police Academy" or "Bad Santa" or "Wild Things."

Maybe one can get a sense of the aesthetics, the social climate, and the politics of Miami Beach, Florida in a movie such as the new "Miami Vice" or the older, more non-fictionalized "A Sculpture of Love and Anguish: The Miami Beach Holocaust Memorial."

Why I Love Miami Beach Florida

Or, maybe one can appreciate the straight up beaches and wind in the palms atmosphere in films like "Always Something Better;" "Black Sunday;" or "The Godfather" or "The Crew."

Sure, it may be an odd, quirky way to go about looking for real estate in Miami Beach Florida or deciding on the ideal vacation hotel or venue.

Then again, it might be a more realistic impression to closely watch a show than to read a pamphlet or two...and besides, how do you think 3-D advertising got its start?

Pompano Beach: The Heart Of The Gold Coast

By Tavis J. Cooper

The Pompano Beach economy is based on tourism, light manufacturing, retail, and high technology with 3,000 acres set aside for industrial and commercial development. Pompano Beach easily accesses the global marketplace and is home to over 50,000 individual business enterprises.

Pompano Beach provides many advantages to the tourist visitor. There are over 2,000 units for visitors' accommodation and over 200 restaurants in the local Pompano Beach area. Pompano Beach is a gateway now as it was a hundred years ago to the famous beaches of the Gold Coast. In Pompano Beach itself, there are over three miles of sandy white beach for your enjoyment.

The city of Pompano Beach, Florida started as a railroad town that opened the rest of Florida to the world. At one time, Pompano Beach was the end of the line so to speak, as the southernmost railroad station of the famous Florida East Coast Railway. One of the employees of that railroad gave Pompano Beach its name. He wrote down the name of the fish he had for dinner, hence, Pompano Beach. The Pompano runs abundantly in the warm waters of the Atlantic off Pompano Beach. The first train arrived in the small settlement of Pompano on February 22, 1896.

Pompano Beach is centrally located on the Gold Coast of Florida in Broward County. Pompano Beach is home to 100,000 permanent residents and an even larger number of part time residents. Pompano Beach is a thriving city midway between Miami and Palm Beach. Pompano Beach visitors and residents use the Ft. Lauderdale / Hollywood International Airport, which is about ten minutes away. Although in many ways a quiet seaside community, Pompano Beach is at center of Broward County business and recreational activities. Pompano Beach has all the benefits with less of the inconveniences of a major metropolitan community.

If golf is your sporting outlet, Pompano Beach offers some great local courses to challenge your skills. If boating is your idea of a great time, numerous marinas dot the Pompano Beach landscape. Pompano Beach also boasts of the only pristine coral reef system on the continental United States. And it is so close to home.

Why I Love Miami Beach Florida

The Pompano Beach business and tourist community likes to say that, "In the heart of everything, we have everything" and that is true. Accommodations and activities run the taste and budget gamut. What ever you need to make you vacation more enjoyable, Pompano Beach has it. In 2005, the city was designated as an "All-American City".
