Why The Internet Doesn't Work

By Dale Armin Miller

Why The Internet Doesn't Work by Dale Armin Miller

I started selling things in the fifth grade. Seeds, door to door.

Some of my friends would try that for a couple days, too. Even a month. Then they would hold meetings about how selling seeds didn't work.

Well, at least that's how the meetings started -- I always had to leave early to do more selling ... or collect my money.

I've heard "It doesn't work!" about everything.

For example:

"I spent $600 on an Xer-Cycle eight months ago, and I haven't lost a pound." ... although usually it's just "Xer-Cycle? It doesn't work."

Well, do the pedals turn?

"I mean I haven't lost a pound."

Well, did you follow the directions?

"Yes, I read the directions."

Did you follow the directions?

"I already told you I read them!"

Why The Internet Doesn't Work

That's not what I asked. I asked if you followed them — and, if so, for how long?

Sometimes the spouse will reveal that the Xer-Cycle was used for 20 minutes the first day, ten minutes the next, and, well, "It doesn't work."

The truth is that nothing works, including the Internet. Not one damn thing.

There are things that do or do not make it easier for you to work. But it always boils down to this: YOU have to work.

"Work?!" — Maynard G. Krebs

Yes, work. Hard work. Putting in your time. Paying your dues.

If what you're doing isn't working for you then, for God's sake, do it differently. Or do something else.

If you don't want to do that, it's fine by me. I don't mind. It's even reasonable. But, if that's what you decide, be honest about it: That's what you decided.

"What about all those Internet companies on the news that went belly up? How can I hope to succeed?"

What about all the Internet companies that did NOT go belly up? ... and are doing just fine, thank you very much. If you want to focus on how airliners crash, watch the news. If you want to focus on what works in the airline industry, go to the airport. It's your choice.

Just don't say, "It doesn't work!"

I've been hearing that since I was in fifth grade. Now I'm 49 — you do the math (it depresses me). And I'm so sick of it that I could puke.

New Insurance Options Through The Internet

Why The Internet Doesn't Work

By Elizabeth Newberry

Raise your hand if you have a computer with Internet access, or if you have access to a computer with Internet access. It's probably safe to say that the majority, if not all, of you just raised your hands. That's because computers and the Internet are necessities for many people due to work, and luxuries for others due to, well, Internet addiction.

Thanks to the Internet, we can do everything from pay our bills online to chat with friends who live on the other side of the country, and we do it all without leaving our homes or getting an outrageous phone bill in the mail.

However, there are other benefits to having the Internet that go beyond work-related issues and enjoyment. Having the Internet also allows access to a plethora of information that you may not have been privy to without the Internet. Some of that information includes about the various kinds of insurance.

Many of us rely on our local insurance agents to get the insurance coverage we need. We'll purchase homeowner's insurance, car insurance, and life insurance from those familiar faces. If we're lucky, we'll rely on our employers for health insurance. Yet, there's a world of insurance out there that goes beyond your hometown, and the Internet can help you find it.

Whether you're looking for auto insurance or dental insurance, there's no doubt you'll find an insurance company online that sells it. The even better news is that when you search for insurance using the Internet, you can also compare different insurance companies to get the best insurance coverage for you, your home, your car, and your family.

So, the next time you sit down in front of the family computer, take a few minutes from checking your email and do a quick search for insurance, even if you already have all of your insurance needs met. You may end up finding a better deal.
