When you need a specialist, how do you go about finding one? Do you look in the Yellow Pages, go to an HMO or walk-in, rely on a hospital referral, a friend, an online directory of doctors, or perhaps a referral from your primary care physician?

Looking for the best doctor to suite your medical needs can be a problem, especially if you don't have time and you need to research the doctor's credentials. Whether you're in urgent need of help, or just need a second opinion, I will show you how to access all the information you need - through the Internet's Virtual Top Doctor Consultant.

Information on Doctors' Credentials

Many organizations house comprehensive credentials, such as licensure, status and so forth. These organizations include:

- * American Board of Medical Specialists
- * American Medical Association
- * Federation of State Medical Boards
- * Your local State Medical Board
- * Public Citizen Questionable Doctors
- * Medical Societies

Then you have other establishments which gather up this information in their own logistical format and provide this information to consumers. Most companies provide information about doctors who have had disciplinary action taken against them. And most consumers want to know whether their doctor has had disciplinary action taken against them. At the same time, most doctors - even the best ones - are sued at one point or other during their careers. It's important to recognize that just because a doctor has been sued (or not) does not mean he/she is incompetent, and that very often he or she is innocent of the alleged malpractice.

What is a Virtual Top Doctor Consultant

As you probably know by now, there are literally hundreds of different types of consultants.

What is a Virtual Assistant? A Virtual Assistant is a highly skilled, independent entrepreneur who provides business services in a remote or virtual environment. Some have used terms like telecommuter or working from home.

Employers are looking for alternatives to having a full–time employee.
