

With Passion, Everyday?

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

With Passion, Everyday?

By Julie Jordan Scott

With Passion, Everyday? by Julie Jordan Scott

"Well, you learn something new everyday." said Mrs. Parker, the neighborhood matriarch. She was looking vacantly out her domain, otherwise known as our neighborhood. She sounded lackadaisical: surely not intrigued by the process.

Lily scrunched her nose: Mrs. Parker's expression and demeanor were so opposite to the statement. Lily found it very exhilarating to imagine and embrace the new lessons available to each of us daily.

How often have we heard "You learn something new every day"? What have we believed about that statement?

Think for a moment.

Tell me, what did you learn today? How about yesterday? How about on January 16 (or pick any random date)?

Abigail Adams said, "Learning is not attained by chance. It must be sought for with ardor and attended to with diligence."

As people seeking to make a difference in the world, the first place to start learning is within our own lives. Being conscious in the realm of learning is simply being alert and awake to all the possibilities that surround you daily.

For example, I scan the newspaper everyday.

I had an assignment in a class I was taking to read the newspaper and find two articles which are especially interesting to me and add them to a scrap book for future reference.

With Passion, Everyday?

Now when I scan the newspaper, I am looking for headlines that light something within me. Sometimes my local paper does not cut it, so I subscribed to the New York Times Headline email service. Today one of the articles I chose to study was about bus service in Atlanta.

>From that one article I can do several things to grow my business and positively impact my life.

One, I can take examples directly from the transportation model and speak about this issue with other people. Another is I can discuss both interagency collaboration and cooperation as well as this context for cooperation in the private sector as well. I can write articles about either collaboration. I can write about cooperation. I can talk about creating a successful life from projects which appear to be unsuccessful in the first place.

Last week my favorite new information was about the Rice Genome from an article in the Los Angeles Times. A genome, I learned, is a completely mapped structure of a living organisms DNA. Not only did I learn what a genome is, I also learned about the significance of this genome and the impact this scientific evidence may have on the entire world. Not simply for the consumers of rice, for the consumers of ALL agricultural products. This fact is amazingly huge.

Until I read the article, I did not even know what a genome was!

Merriem Webster teaches us that learning to gain knowledge or understanding of or skill in by study, instruction, or experience.

It is to be facilitated with respect and continued to be cultivated throughout life. To learn is to know. To understand. To be able to integrate lessons and apply them to your life with both effectiveness and efficiency.

Mrs. Parker had the words right. We do have the ability to learn something new everyday. The piece she did not understand, she did not know, is that to truly learn everyday requires that we gain knowledge and understanding. It is not just about being a repository of facts.

It is about using those facts to passionately connect with the world and the people around you.

With Passion, Everyday?

Passion Activator: For the next three days, scan the newspaper and pick out an article or two that interest you. Look at the article not from a perspective of a collection of facts that are not connected to your life and your work.

Instead, ask yourself to create two or three ways the article connects to your life and your work. Ask yourself questions such as: "What solutions does this article point to in my business?" "What are the similarities with this story and a particular situation in my life?" and "What is it that called me to select this article above the myriad of other articles published today?"

I guarantee you will begin to learn truly learn something new. And use that knowledge. Today and everyday.

Activate Your Passion!

Julie Jordan Scott is a Success Coach, Writer, Speaker, Radio Host and Mom Extraordinaire who inspires people worldwide to live more passionate lives through her personal and group coaching, teleclasses, seminars and free ezines. Subscribe to DailyPassionActivator now via email: <mailto:DailyPassionActivator-subscribe@Yahogroups.com> or via web <http://www.5passions.com/subpage.html>

Your Home Business Success Starts With Your Passion

By Daegan Smith

In whatever career you may find yourself in, there is no such thing as "information overload." Know as much as you can, do what others do, and what the entire company does. Equip yourself with a total knowledge of your work environment, enough to make you feel like you own the network. Who knows, you may someday.

Walking an extra mile, being organized at work, honesty, trust-worthiness, dependability, being a team player, loyalty, and resourcefulness are the must-be characteristics of your passion.

Are you the type of worker who is always looking forward to Monday morning? Or you are the type of worker who's pleading and hoping that it will always be Friday the other day? There are workers who are called TGIF workers? What is TGIF? TGIF stands for Thank God It's Friday. TGIF workers can't wait for their minimum of 8 hours a day to finish. If you classify yourself as a TGIF worker, then you are certainly lacking something or missing something important in your career life - passion.

What does it take to be passionate in your job? There is always that old maxim "Do what you love the most." A passionate worker always has the appetite to go to work every day. He or she doesn't mind if it's Monday or Friday. He or she treats everyday as an important day in his or her career life. What do you think is the result of being a passionate in your career life? When you are passionate in your job, you enjoy it and even seek for more. There is always the idea in your mind that you can always do better than that. You are not satisfied to mediocre work. And it pays to be a passionate worker not because you will be accelerated into higher position nor you will be given extra compensation, but because you can get things done in your work with a sense of appreciation.

With Passion, Everyday?

In your work as an entrepreneur at home, you got to have extra passion. Why do you need it? You might be asking. Take this for an instance; can you able to sit a little longer whenever a meeting comes? Can you stay a little longer if you're transacting some business matters to a customer that asks too many questions? In short, can you be patient enough but maintaining the passion in you? You can be energetic enough in your work but it demands greater than that. Still, you need passion in your work.

So, what separates a passionate worker to a worker that only minds work?

People who practice passion in their work always perform their work at their best. They always strive for perfection in everything. They see perfection as unattainable in most things. But their eagerness drive them much nearer to it than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as an imperfection. Passionate workers put extra care in their work and they aren't satisfy for anything less.

At this point you might be asking either one or more of the following questions: 1. Do I need passion even though my work is just a home business? 2. To whom will I use passion? 3. What will passion do for me? What is its impact in my performance? 4. How may I know my passion?

The last question on the list is very interesting. In one way or the other, passion creates a difference in terms of performance between a passionate worker and the other. What do you like the most? What are your interests? What type of job do you enjoy the most? The answers to these questions vary depending on the personality of a worker. But whatever will it be, if you can answer the questions then that will be your checklist on how you may know your passion. Each worker has different passion. One's passion is not the same with the other. Your job as a home business representative takes a little talking to different people. If you found that your passion is more on communication, then you are really entitled for the home business. If you like to deal with different people and enjoy front liner's job, you are really fitted for the home business.

Daegan Smith is the leader of the fastest growing team of successful home business enterpernuers on the net. Find out how we're creating financial freedom all across the globe and how to get in on the action FREE =>

With Passion, Everyday?

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!