Women of the Net

Women of the Net

by: Cathy Bryant

Two years ago, when I had been working online about a year, an online colleague approached me about writing an article for a special edition of his newsletter which was to feature successful women online. Naturally, I agreed.

As I was researching for the article, I read a statistic that revealed that women over 50 were one of the fastest growing groups of internet users. That didn't surprise me, as at the time I was approaching that "golden age" and had contact with others online who were also in that age group.

All these women were using the vehicle of the internet to earn an income online – and the numbers were growing every day.

So I wrote the article, and it was published not only in my colleague's newsletter but many others as well.

Now, two years later, I realize that the things I discussed in that article are as relevant today as they were two years ago when the article was first published – and we all know that for anything to stay current online for two years it must be significant!

For that reason, I feel that they bear repeating again. After all, there are an untold number of women – in this age group as well as younger – who have entered the world of internet business since that first article was published two years ago.

So what did I reveal in that article? Consider this...

Women of ALL ages have made a conscious decision to tackle the complexities of technology in order to achieve their own goals and aspirations, whatever they may be.

Women of the Net

What is it about the internet that is so appealing to women? It's quite obvious, actually. The internet is a massively large vehicle for what? Communication. And what do women generally do better than men? You got it...communicate!

Look around, and you see women everywhere online. And what else do you see? Sites created by women – providing every type of information, service, or opportunity you can imagine.

Who are these women? People you know –

Young mothers working from home in order to be there with their children

Former corporate executives using skills learned on the job to create their own successful businesses online

Empty nesters who find themselves embracing the technology of their children's generation

Young women just out of school who have chosen the career path of entrepreneur and are using the internet to achieve those dreams

Each is different – but you can be sure that all these women have certain characteristics in common. They have the determination to tackle the often confusing technology of the internet, and they have the passion it takes to accomplish their goals.

And succeed they do – in large numbers!

The net–domain – backbone of the web

The net–domain – the backbone of the web

We do not always realize, that figures are just quantity and can deceive about quality.

In spite of the fact, that the net–domain is only the No. 4 in terms of the number of domain names registered, it works as a backbone of the web. The net–domains build the largest Top Level Domain by number of hosts, or machines connected to the Internet. More than 44 percent of name servers use net–domains. We presume, that programmers and other technical experts have a more narrow emotional relationship to .net than to .com. Their sympathy for .net is just greater than for .com.

Women of the Net

Historically .net was once reserved for providers. This might have still an influence to the technical use of .net and the importance of this use. Every programmer and hostmaster has an idea of .net, but not every programmer and hostmaster has an idea of .com. In some way .net stands for the web.

Other facts:

- 31 percent of all page views are dependent on a net-domain for resolution
- 32 percent of all B2C e-Commerce in 2004 is dependent on a net-domain for resolution.
