Wow Gold Buying Safety Measures

By Todd Dickerson

Ok, you're sick and tired of grinding and working 8 hours of day in World of Warcraft to make that 100 gold. It's time to buy some WoW Gold and buy it now. But wait, who do you buy from? Who can you trust? You want the best price but you don't want to get ripped off by some fly by night gold seller... believe me there are plenty of them. I'll out line a good starting point for you so you know what to look for when buying.

Before you buy there are a few ground rules and precautions you should know. First, it may seem like common sense, but never give out your password or login information to any gold seller. They don't need it! They only need to know what server you're on and where to meet you.

You also should check into the seller's reputation. One simple tactic is googling their name and quickly looking over what others have said about them. Also if they use paypal as a payment method be sure they are a paypal certified merchant that accepts credit card payments. Sellers must go through a long process with paypal verifying their credit card, identity, address, and bank account. If anything goes wrong paypal can track them easily. Also paypal has a list of reputation points for all their merchant sellers. You can easily see how many sales the wow gold seller has made via paypal. I would recommend not buying from a seller with less than 10 sales.

Another thing I always do before buying wow gold is talk to someone! I know you might hate the thought of picking up the phone and calling to some company when all you want to do is click a button to order. So, don't call. Talk to live support. Every good wow gold seller will have 24/7 live chat support. If they don't, they can't deliver your gold when you want it... now! So make sure you talk to someone before ordering even if all you do is ask them if they're awake. This way they'll know you're ordering and be waiting to fulfill your order as soon as it comes through.

So use some common sense when buying World of Warcraft gold online. It's easy to think you're still in a safe game when you really need to consider the person or company you buy from fairly carefully before buying.

Buying Gold: Things To Look Out For...

By Christine Loxley

The first rule when you are buying any type of gold jewelry is a simple one: make sure that the gold is hallmarked. Gold is stamped according to how pure it is as you can have 24K, 22K, 18K, 14K, 10K, and 9K.

There are some instances where the hallmark comes in the form of a fraction to show the exact percentage of its purity. When looking into gold jewelry you need to look if there are the letters GP or EP anywhere on the piece of jewelry. GP stands for gold that is not pure gold but gold-plated. This is important because a piece of jewelry that you think is inexpensive can carry this insignia and it basically means that there is not much actual gold on the piece. EP means that the gold is electro-plated.

If you run into someone selling gold where there is no marking on the gold at all assume the worst that it is goldtone which is not gold in any way but a metal which is golden in color. If the price of a gold piece of jewelry is too good to be true it probably is. There are many types of gold available at different prices just be aware of the different worth of each type of gold and then see if it is a good deal or not.

You can not judge gold by its color. Even though with gold with a higher level of purity it will be brighter in color than a lower level purity gold. If you are looking into buying gold jewelry which is older if it is solid gold it should still not tarnish. If the piece is made from goldtone or is gold plated than it generally will show some sign of tarnishing.

These are some little things to know about gold, but considering gold and gold jewelry can be expensive it can be wise to have a professional jeweler or metals expert look at a piece you will be buying to see if it is the read deal or just fool's gold.
