Writing Press Releases That Get Noticed

by: Brian Moore

An example of a successful press release can be found at <http://www.allprobizops.com/successrelease.html>.

Take a moment to read through that article and then take a closer look.

Here are the questions:

Who...will bring or brought about the event?

What...is going to happen or has happened?

Where...will or did this take place?

When...will or did the event occur?

Why...will or did it occur?

How...will or did it happen?

Who...will benefit from reading your press release?

What...do you want them to know?

Writing Press Releases That Get Noticed

When...is your information available?

Where...can they find more information?

Why...is your information valuable in the lives of your readers?

These are the best means I know to get your press release published once it's submitted to an editor.
