Now that everyone can easily access free music files online, it was only a matter of time before people started looking for copies of their favorite free music videos. If you want to get free music videos you can try some of the streaming radio stations.

Many radio stations like Launch on yahoo are now expanding their range of services and offering mp3 downloads and music videos in addition to their streaming radio broadcasts.

You can also try to download music videos on many of the file sharing software applications on line. This is of course taking a risk because music video files are much larger than the mp3 songs that are being traded on the major file sharing networks.

In addition to longer download times, unless you get your downloads from a reputable source, you cannot be sure that there are no viruses or other malicious code attached to the file. In either cases, you can find lots of music videos online. Just log on to one of the music services, search for an artist and then enjoy the video downloads.

If you have a DVR on your computer, you can even write the videos to DVD players and that way you can pop them in and watch them on the TV. You can build your collection and not take up all the space on your computer hard drive.

The ranges of music videos that you can find will strongly mirror the range of popular songs that you can find in the online music catalogs. Right now, Pop/Rock, Hip Hop and Country music are the three biggest selling genres.

So, if you want to download music videos from an artist in any of these categories, you shouldn't have any problem finding them online. Also, the newer the videos, the higher the probability that you will find a copy online.
