

sex of the baby

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

sex of the baby

By dr anil maheshwari

sex of the baby by dr anil maheshwari

Divine doctor.

Just wanted to share this short article with you. Kindly go thru' it very carefully and let me know your views.

dr anil maheshwari.

Myth: Sex of the baby is chosen by the male.

Reality: Sex of the baby is chosen by the female.

Discussion: For centuries before the advent of modern medical science, it was believed that the woman was responsible for the birth of a male or a female child and that the male had no say in choosing the sex of the unborn baby. Even today in many indian villages and other rural areas around the world(where ignorance of medical knowledge still prevails)—it is the woman who is still incriminated and blamed for repeatedly giving birth to a female child. But now with the discovery of the x-chromosomes sperms and y-chromosomes sperms in the semen, the medical scientists proclaimed that it is the male who is responsible for choosing or selecting the sex of the baby. But the medical scientists have overlooked one very important factor : namely the patho-physiological conditions, status(of the sperms and the ovum) and other unseen factors leading to chemotaxis(attraction of the sperms towards the ovum)---which finally leads to conception and eventually decides the sex of the baby.

Now let us examine the patho-physiology and the ionic status of the 'x' and 'y' sperms, and the variable charge of the ovum which ultimately decides which sperm (x or y) will fertilize the ovum.

sex of the baby

By prior knowledge we now know that sperms containing the X chromosome are negatively charged while sperms containing the Y chromosome are positively charged. This fact was observed when the sperms were separated by electrophoresis. Numerous studies have revealed that when a weak electrical current was passed through a solution containing spermatozoa, those with the X chromosome were attracted by the anode (+) and those with the Y chromosome by the cathode (-). Some scientists have also identified the appearance of a brief luminous ring at the moment of contact between spermatozoon and ovule. This phenomenon has since been measured and is proof of an electrical involvement in fertilisation. Also the charge on the ovum membrane was not fixed but alternated from positive to neutral and to a negative charge in a cycle. This was called the polarity cycle of the ovum membrane. This polarity was found to be predictable but totally separate from the menstrual cycle. The polarity cycle, which is unknown to most of us, was there in addition to the ovulation/menstrual cycle.

The argument behind this finding is that gender(sex) of the baby is influenced by what scientists call "ionic factors" which generate the charge on the ovum membrane and on the sperms.

First let us view this in a different way—According to the Laws of nature—whatever is happening at the microscopic level is reflected in the happenings at the macroscopic level—or—in other words whatever happens at the physical (gross) level is a reflection of what happens at the subtle(cellular) level. So we now come to the most important aspect of man–woman relationship ie. marriage (selection of the partner for mating).

Let us now consider the marriage ceremony in various religions:

In Christianity—it is the bride who is first asked by the priest "whether she accepts the would–be bridegroom as the lawfully–wedded husband".

In Hinduism—it is the bride who first garlands the bridegroom, meaning that she has accepted him as her husband and she will bear his children only.

Also it would be worthwhile to note that in Muslim marriage—the would–be bride only is asked by the muslim priest whether she accepts the invitation of marriage(nikah) from her would–be husband following which the marriage is solemnised.

So in man–woman relationship—man is always the proposer and woman is always the chooser—never vice versa.

From the above observation we can say that the proposing rights are a male prerogative and the choosing rights lie exclusively with the female. Just as a woman cannot be impregnated against her wishes—similarly at the micro level—both sperms (x and y having different charge) are attracted to the ovum having a variable charge—but only the sperm which has the opposite charge from that of the ovum will be able to fertilize the ovum and the other sperm will be rejected.

So when the ovum membrane is positively charged, it will attract the sperm carrying X chromosome (which is negatively charged) and a baby girl is produced. When the ovum membrane is negatively charged, it will attract the sperm carrying the Y chromosome (which is positively charged), and a baby boy is produced. In short, we can say that the 'mating rights' are exclusively with the ovum only-----once the ovum is fertilised then only the x or y sperm determines the sex of the baby(xx means a female and xy means a male)---

---So would it not be most appropriate to say that it is the female which chooses the sex of the baby (by virtue of selecting which sperm to mate with)-----and the male only determines the sex of the baby after conception.(so it is not only unfair but also wrong to blame the male for choosing the sex of the baby---as the poor male has absolutely no control over which sperm(x or y) will finally fertilise the ovum ---because it is the mother nature(ovum) who finally decides which sperm(x or y) to mate with in accordance with its polarity-----which eventually decides the sex of the baby.

Conclusion: Female of the species are more powerful than the male.

Your comments and feedback are eagerly awaited.

If you are interested in many of the misconceptions prevalent in the world today then please visit the site below---i bet you will be surprised.

ok---om shanti

dr anil maheshwari.

website : www.creator-creation.com (for beginners)

I am dr anil maheshwari ---ms---47 years old male---consultant surgeon andgastro-enterologist from bombay---india.I am interested in spirituality and meditation and various religions of the world.

Tips For Preparing For Your New Baby

By Gabriel Adams

When you first find out that your wife is pregnant with your first baby, you are usually very excited. Then slowly this excitement starts to turn to anxiety and fear. Having a baby is a huge step in your life, and you need to prepare for it as much as possible before the baby arrives. Once the baby is here, you will be amazed at the lack of time you have for anything except taking care of the baby. Here are a few tips to help you prepare for your baby's arrival.

The first thing that you need to do is to set a doctor's appointment to get tested to make sure that your wife is definitely pregnant. The home pregnancy tests are usually very accurate, but the test at the doctor's office is almost perfect. Your wife needs to start taking prenatal vitamins as soon as possible to make sure that your baby is getting enough of the right nutrients. After visiting the doctor to make sure mom and baby have all that they need to be healthy, it is time to start working on your house.

sex of the baby

Make sure that you have the nursery ready before the baby is born. If you find out the sex of the child before birth, then you can completely have the nursery decorated before the child arrives. If you do not want to know the sex of the baby, then you can use neutral colors, so that it will not matter what the sex of the baby is. Either way, make sure that the nursery is ready for your new baby, because you will not have anytime after the baby is born to work on it.

Another way to prepare for your new baby is to read as many magazines and books as you can. Also talk to as many parents as you know to help prepare yourself for your baby's arrival. Nothing will fully prepare you for your baby's care, but this knowledge will get you out of some trying situations. Once you are prepared try to relax and take it one day at a time, because at first it will be a struggle.

Get a Personalized baby blanket to prepare for your new baby at

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!